

The Wild Garden

The fenno-baltic wild garden at the suburb Kulosaari of Helsinki.

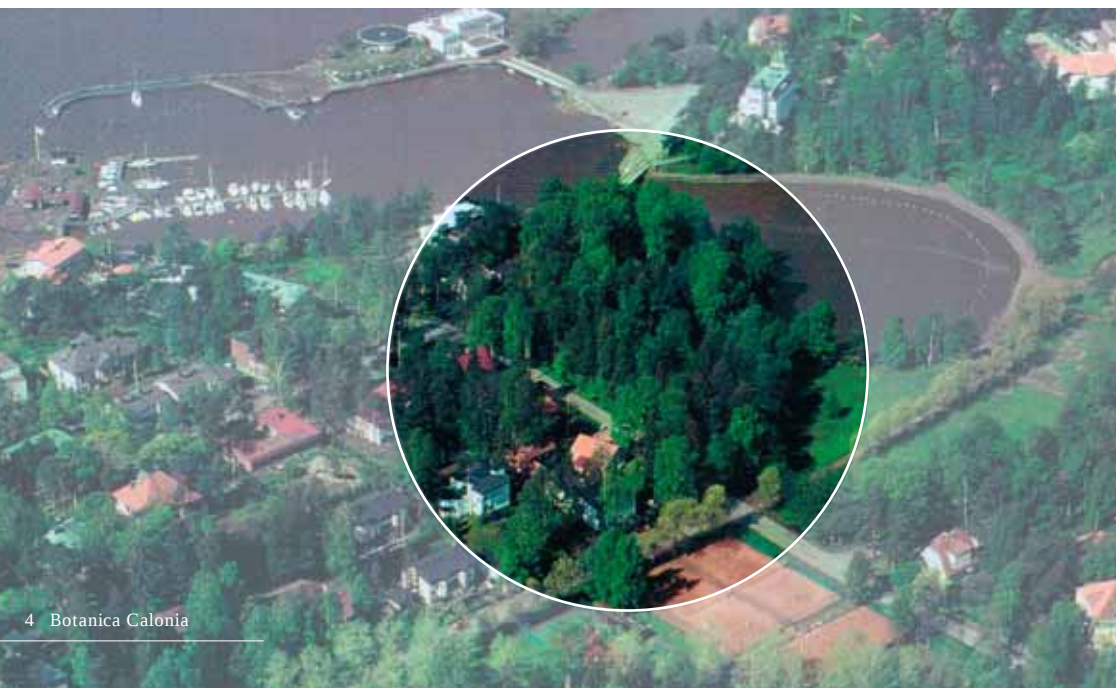

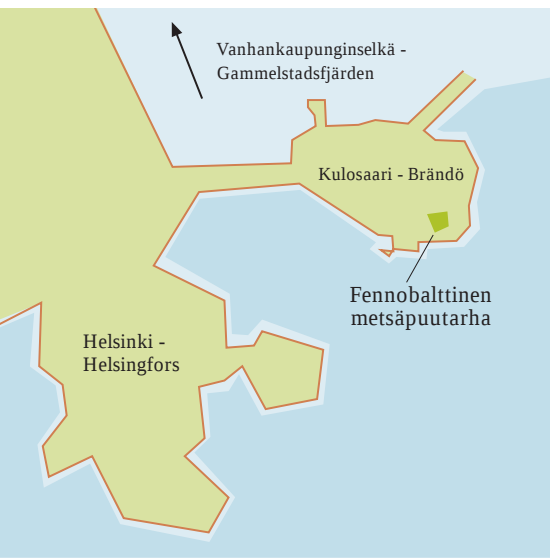

The Wild Garden

The Wild Garden is a concept that was born in the turn of the 20th century as a counterweight for gardens demanding constantly intensive care. The plants planted in the wild garden are plants from the nature or other plants that do need not care.

It is new that land owned by the county is to be prepared and developed by private funds. The wild garden will be born to bring joy to all of us. The area will be improved to the state of the surrounding and create it to a place where you can familiarize with the fauna round The Gulf of Finland. At the same time the connection between peoples will strengthen. One target is to make the forest a natural part of the already existing Eugen Schauman english style park as one could say like in “Die Zauberflöte” the flute will start to play a melody which little by little connects in the main thema to which together forms a unity. This is the goal of the wild garden.

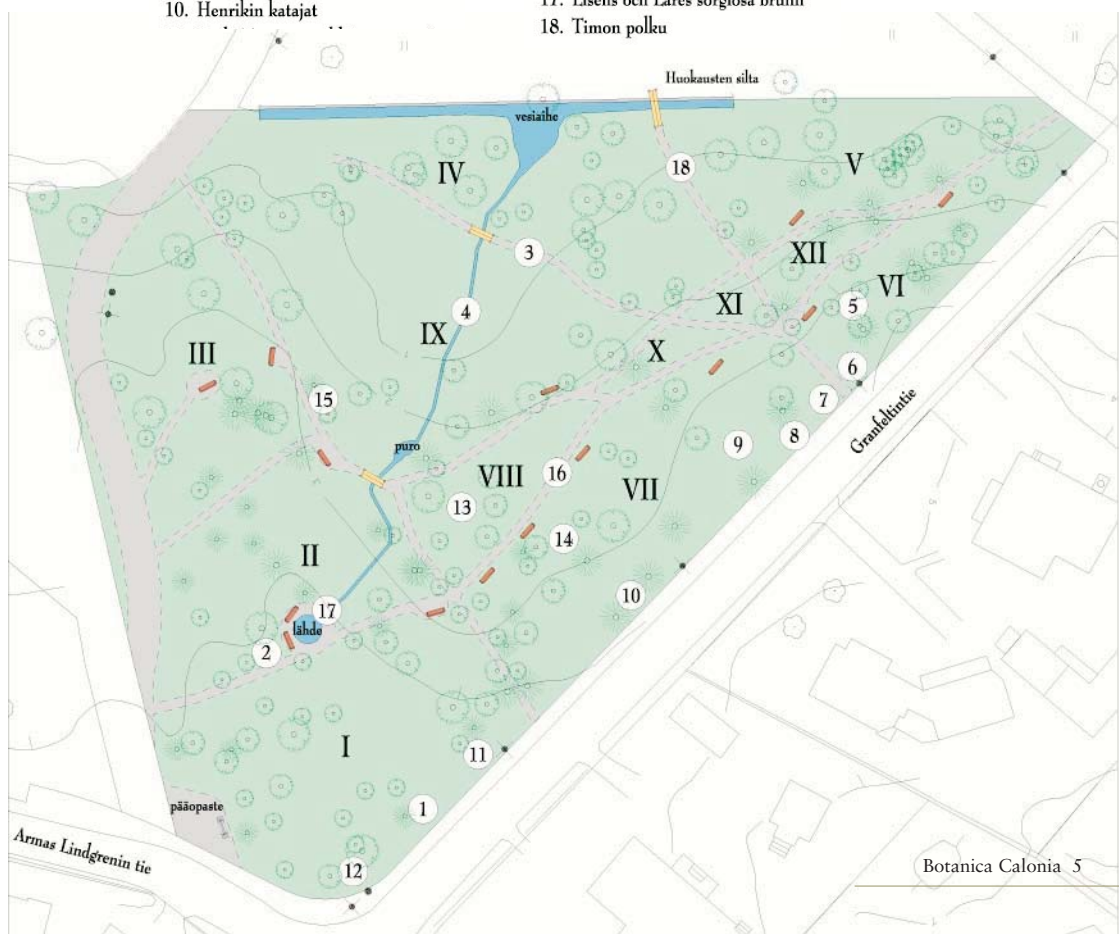

First goal is to make the forest into a nice shape and order at May 2007. At that time begins the events for honour of the hundreds years anniversary of the birth of Kulosaari community.

Some of the people who are in the project

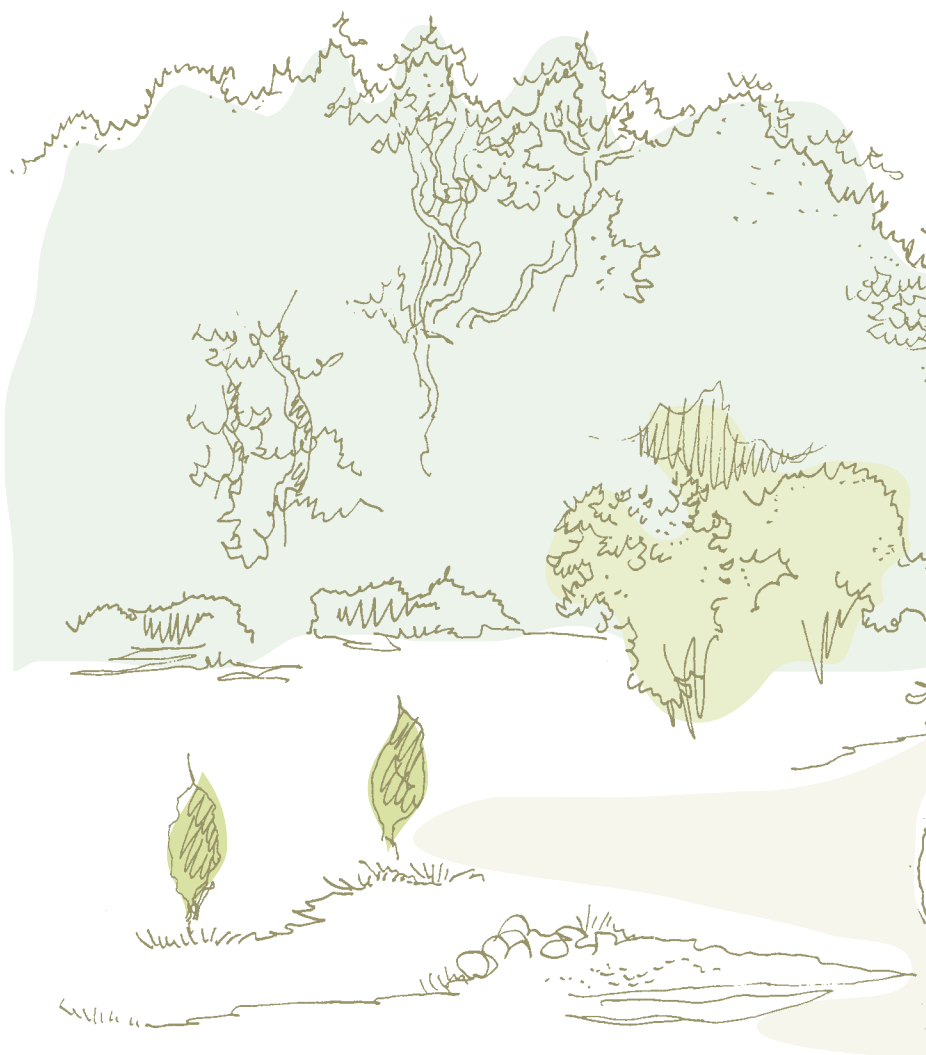

The support of the head gardener of city of Helsinki made it possible to even to think to take care of the forest which had not got any attention in tehth's of years. Now it is possible with private money to create it to an interesting area. There have been neighborly events 2003-2004 to clean the place.

Rudolf Pakki fellow from the area west of St Peterburg Inkeri land, who had to leave Finland as a young boy, has created the connections to the palace gardeners of Catharina the great so called Puschino. His relatives have been palace gardeners. He has helped to create the connection to Estonia Andres Tarand , today member of Euparliament. Thanks for Tarand there are agreements with both The Botanical Gardens of Tallinn and Tartu to find the righth Estonian plants to the wild garden. Heiki Tamm, the directos of Tartu, have promised to donate twenty bushes and two threes to the garden. Andres Tarand have promised an oak tree.
